Interior door handle

Function

The interior door handle is used to open the door from the inside of the vehicle, multiplying the applied force used by means of a cable to operate the door lock assembly.

Cause of failure

Where the door lock cable attaches to the interior door handle, it can weaken - over time - after many operations of opening the door. When the door handle eventually breaks, the door is unable to be opened from the inside of the vehicle. The handle will break sooner if there is any wear in the door lock assembly; this wear is caused by the constant opening and closing of the door and accumulation of road debris and dust in the door lock.

Before replacing a broken interior door handle, check the operation of the door lock and cable for wear and performance.
